Counselling & Psychotherapy: In General

“The curious paradox is that when I accept myself just as I am, then I can change.”

*Carl Rogers

- Seek to enable greater wellbeing primarily through talking therapies
- Area of increasing importance as the need for adequate mental health provision has a higher political profile
- A diverse and evolving group of different approaches each with a distinct philosophy / ethos, and practice context.

Counselling and Psychotherapy @ Salford

- Our UG & PG programmes primarily focus on Person Centred Counselling & Cognitive Behavioural Therapy
 - Person Centred Counselling (PCC): fosters a strong therapeutic relationship based on non-directive principles, to enable clients to develop their own insight, resources and capacity for change.
 - Cognitive Behavioural Therapy (CBT): uses models of how thoughts, emotions and behaviours interact to offer structured approaches to helping clients cope with specific problems in living.

BSc (Hons) Counselling and Psychotherapy: Professional Practice

- A programme which, on successful completion, qualifies students to work as Professional Counsellors
 - Eligible to apply for individual registration with the British Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy (BACP)
 - Able to apply for higher level BACP accreditation (after gaining post qualifying experience)
 - A professional training in Person Centred Counselling, includes a foundation module in CBT

A Degree of Curiosity...

- Who am I?
- How have I become the person I am?
- How do I relate to other people?
- Who do I want to become?
- How can I make positive changes in my life?
- What do I want out of life?
- How can I help other people find out all of the above?
