Festival of Research
The University’s first Festival of Research (June 25th 2018 – July 20th 2018) is here and there’s still time to get involved. Here are some highlights that you might be interested in:

- Submit a video abstract and be in with a chance of winning a £500 discretionary award to help fund research dissemination related activities (e.g. travel to a conference). More info about the prize and support for those who have never made a video abstract is available here: http://www.ri.salford.ac.uk/training-development
- Come and show off your research at the Library’s Research in the Park day on July 6th. We already have lots of Salford based researchers to come and demonstrate their research in Peel Park for the public, school children and anyone else who wants to come along. If you can think of an engaging way to present your work, do get in touch. The more the merrier!
- Attend one of the many training opportunities over the course of the Festival. The schedule is being updated all the time at https://www.salford.ac.uk/researchfest
- Get involved in the Library Happening – a series of performances and exhibitions in the Clifford Whitworth Library. We’re still looking for contributors, no ideas are too wild.
- Come along to SPARC, the postgraduate research conference on July 4th and 5th at MediaCity.
- Tweet about the Festival of Research (@FestivalOfRese1 SalfordResearchFirst) and bring a friend to one of the public events.

Hope to see you all there.

Many thanks,

Steve Carlton
