MANCHESTER

Following on from our well-established postgraduate programmes in Terrorism and Security, and Intelligence and Security Studies, from September 2021 we'll be offering a new BA (Hons) course in Intelligence Analysis.

The course addresses both the theory and practice of intelligence analysis. Students will study theories of intelligence alongside an introduction to the use of software relevant for intelligence analysis in the 21st century.

On the course, students will be given an overview of historical events which have led to today's geopolitical landscape. A range of core and optional modules will also give the opportunity to explore the skills and considerations needed to operate in the field of intelligence analysis.

Graduates from the course will have the skills needed to secure jobs in a range of roles in security, intelligence, law enforcement and beyond.
